Brett J. Barthelmeh is an Associate Attorney focusing his practice on life and estate planning.

Brett joined Squillace & Associates, P.C. in 2009 and concentrates in the areas of Estate Planning, Probate, and Trust Administration. Brett assists client families in creating, implementing and maintaining plans that are both values-based and tax efficient. He is a member of WealthCounsel, a national association of life, legacy, and estate planning practitioners. His practice also includes work on asset protection strategies; Elder Law planning and special needs planning.

Prior to joining the firm, Brett supported the underwriting department of The Debt Exchange, a Boston-based financial services company, as a contract legal analyst. At DebtX, Brett assisted in the repackaging and trading of commercial and residential distressed debt securities for private investment auction. These auctions facilitated both private financial institutions and the FDIC in creating liquidity.

Brett is a 2008 graduate of Syracuse University's College of Law where he earned a certification in Estate Planning and Family Law. During law school Brett dedicated his summer associate experience to estate planning and business organization matters for affluent individuals at Lentz, Cantor & Massey, Ltd. He also served as a summer judicial clerk to the Hon. Arnold L. New in the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas.

Brett earned his B.S., cum laude, from Boston University College of Communication in 2004. At Law School Brett did pro bono work counseling indigent clients regarding tax disputes with the IRS as a student attorney in the Low Income Taxpayer Clinic.

Brett lives on the South Shore and enjoys international travel and outdoor activities. He has traveled extensively throughout the United States, Europe, Central & South America, and New Zealand.
